Ramm Makes Room

Washington, May 15. Green B Ramm Jr, son of the commissioner of pensions has tendered his resignation to the president [illegible] Mr Ramm Jr has for some time past been suffering the official sickness of Secretary Noble and it until just before his departure for St Louis about a week ago did he [illegible] of facts that would warrant him in taking official action in the matter. It is said, however, that upon what appeared to be perfectly trustworthy testimony that Mr Ramm Jr had been a party to certain irregular and unlawful proceedings [illegible] appointments to minor positions in the pension bureau The temporary appropriation to his own use of $[illegible] belonging to the government is also charged against him

Mr Ramm Jr it is said, strongly protested his innocence of the charges made against him but the secretary thought in any event his usefulness in the pension bureau was at an end and so determined to require his resignation

General Ramm the young man's father, who up to that time had not even heard the rumors affecting his son was spoken to on the subject The general while expressing his astonishing faith in his son's rectitude said that he would require his resignation at once This he did and he himself brought the resignation to the interior department.

Why It was Done.

Washington, May 15.—The secretary of the interior to-day accepted the resignation of G B Ramm Jr as the chief clerk of the pension bureau It is understood that his resignation was called for and was the direct result of using his influence and position to secure the appointment of persons to positions in the bureau in return for financial benefits received or promised Interior department officials assert most emphatically that General Raum, commissioner of pensions, is in no way responsible for the conduct of his son and that he was ignorant of the transactions.

A Specimen Indeed

Baltimore, Md., May 15.—Dominick Marchion, an Italian just released from the Maryland penitentiary, where he had served five years for the killing a fellow-workman in this state, was today rearrested on the demand for extradition as a convict and escaped murderer, made by the consul of Italy at Philadelphia. The story of the alleged crime makes it appear that Marchion is a member of the murderous Mafia gang. M. Repucci was believed to know more than was considered safe about a murder in which Marchion (then known as Malchionda) and another were concerned. Marchion and the third man were heard to say that Repucci must be put away

On November 3, 1883, Repucci's body was found and in due course the murderers were convicted and sentenced to the galleys for life It has not transpired how Marchion escaped to this country, but it appears that his identity [illegible] was not proved after he reached America, and his sentence to the Maryland penitentiary for murder was the result

Attempt at Train Wrecking

Buffalo, N Y., May 15.—A special dispatch from Mayville, N Y., says that yesterday morning between 4 and 5 o'clock, as Roadmaster McGuire was coming over the Western New York and Pennsylvania railroad, he discovered a large pile of ties on the track near Summerdale. He got them removed just before the Pittsburg express due here at 5 15, came over the road. In the afternoon Sheriff Case arrested John Smith, a tramp, aged 59 years, for the crime and he confessed his guilt. When asked his reason for placing the obstructions on the track, he replied that he had none. He appears to be insane

A Manipur Blue Book

London, May 16.—The Daily News says that the blue book on Manipur has established most decisively that the government was responsible for the Manipur disaster that it dispatched very slack officials to carry out a certain purpose, namely, the arrest of Senapatty, at the same time omitting all mention of the crafty design from the political memorandum given and the Quetton had no discretionary power worthy of the name All the papers unite in calling for the severe punishment of Senapatty

Bierstadt's Contribution.

Washington, May 15.—Mr. Albert Bierstadt, the celebrated artist, will do his share toward commemorating the Four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, by painting a mammoth historical picture of Watling's island which is held by a majority of geographers to have been the island which was the first land fall of Columbus. Mr. Bierstadt has just returned from a trip to Watlings island where he took photographs and sketches for the picture which will be finished in time to exhibit at Chicago.

The Penalty of Overwork

New York, May 15.—Rudolph Sigel son of Gen Franz Sigel was arraigned in the Tombs court on a charge of insanity and committed [illegible] He was employed in the park department as a civil engineer up to a week ago. According to his family's statement he was industrious, often working all night after returning from the offices, looking over the work of the two men he employed Rudolph is General Sigel's favorite son

Controlling the Cash.

London, May 15.—The Times believes the Russian government will withdraw £3,000,000 from London within the next month or two, and that it is doubtful whether the Bank of England will be able to draw that amount from America. Besides which, says the Times, "there is strong probability of a partial failure of European crops which would cause a drain of gold to America in the autumn."

Spring Racing Sports Again on the Ferry Johnson Track.

There was a good sized audience gathered at the Ferry Johnson track south of town yesterday afternoon to witness the races. The crowd came with plenty of good nature but it was only a small portion that remained to the end, and it was pretty well soured in disposition. The trouble was not in the races, but with the management It took nearly four hours to get through what should have been done in an hour and a half or two hours. The wind came up cold and the people got tired of waiting for hours to see little quarter mile dashes that were over in a few seconds. Then again there was nearly an hour's wait for the start at the first, waiting for the people. Colorado Springs audiences have learned that there is no necessity for them to hurry as the performance will wait for them to saunter in and they take advantage of it. This is true at church entertainments, the opera house, races and wherever there is a public gathering, and the management of those entertainments will soon have to take hold of matters with a determined grip.

What there were of the races yesterday were very pleasing, and those who attend to-day can expect to be well entertained if the management keep things moving as it has promised to do.

The first race yesterday was a quarter mile dash, with Minnie owned by H Jamison, Jennie June, owned by C F Forsker, and Fannie W., owned by H S King, entered. A smart run was made by Fannie W won, no time being taken.

The second event was a quarter mile run by pole ponies and the entries were Liebig's Pay Roll, J W Proudfit's Tippecanoe, and J S Stevens Billy The last named proved to be a little roan pony known about the city as the "stockbridge" pony After several attempts the horses got off but the judges called them back without the riders hearing When about half through Tippecanoe, which had a walk over, flew the track and Billy won. The race was declared foul and run over exactly the same thing occurring a second time with the exception of a fair start being made.

The third event was the three fourth mile novelty with C F Walker's Mc Bowling, Penix & Phillips Lett's Ariel and J F Cells' Lady B entered This was a very interesting race as Ariel was ahead at the first quarter Lady B at the half mile and McBowling won the three fourth.

The fourth event was the trotting race for gentlemen's roadsters, which should have been the first race. The delay in starting grew out of a misunderstanding as to whether light wagons or sulkeys were to be used. "Nig," one of the horses entered did not show up and finally Mr Chas Allison of Manitou purchased A E Pope's horse and refused to let him enter the race This narrowed it down to G W Adams' Ed N and J S Hall's Glencoe In the first heat the driver of Glencoe could not get his horse down sufficiently and it was a dead to Ed N, although Glencoe came under the wire first. The heat was trotted in 2.55. Glencoe did a good deal better on the next two heats and won the race. The time was 2.58 and 2.55.

TO-DAY'S RACES.

The managers promise that the races will be started on time to-day, and will be hurried through. If so, some good sport can be expected. The following entries were made last night for to-day's sports:

Arsenic Found

Denver, May 15.—[illegible]—Houlton has, after two weeks hard work finished his analysis of Mrs. Barnaby's viscera The result of the analysis of the poison is fully corroborated Dr Newall It disclosed the fact that [illegible] per cent of the [illegible] were arsenic The result of the analysis of the viscera disclosed arsenic in the stomach the liver and the kidneys Professor Houlton had for analysis one kidney weighing four ounces, a portion of the liver weighing three ounces, the stomach and contents weighing six and one-half ounces and fluid from the body, with small portions of the brain, weighing about four and one-half ounces.

"You see" said the professor, "It was ten chances to one that I would find no arsenic in the stomach but I found it in each case and I think those tubes upon the cardboard are about pretty nearly all there was in the stomach excepting of course what is lost in the process of manipulation

Mrs. Barnaby took about two teaspoonfuls of the fluid, which amount contained about eleven grains of arsenic I do not know any name for the solution It is simply arsenic of potash colored with caramel, which is brown sugar or old port wine. I should say from the fact that it contains an excess of carbonate of potassium, it was made by adding carbonate of potassium to arsenious acid The grand jury has not yet made any report upon the case

Charlottesville, Va May 15. At the Virginia Baptist Bible [illegible] meeting 20,000 colored Baptists today, Dr McVickers of Toronto in urging the raising of a fund of $5000 for twenty-five missionaries, drew a gloomy picture of the colored people of the south asserting that they were worse off now in many sections than they were thirty-five years ago He then spoke of what the American Baptist Home Missionary society desired to do for the people of the state

A Train Wrecked

Port Huron Wis, May 15.—At about four o'clock this evening the through vestibule passenger train on the St Paul railway was wrecked near Columbus. Trans-Missouri Association.

Denver, May 14.—A committee consisting of many of the prominent citizens of Colorado appeared before the trans-Missouri association again today to argue in favor of a tourist rate less than the 20 per cent. established and agreed upon by the association. Mr. Thos. Patterson, the eminent attorney of Denver, spoke at length upon the subject, as did other representatives from different parts of the state. It was claimed by Mr. Patterson that it was reported that certain lines discriminated against Colorado on account of important interests in tourist points in other directions, and earned the question that a united effort should be made by the citizens and merchants of Colorado which would result in an animation of any lines acting against the interests of Colorado.

Still of the members favored a low rate, but on account of the opposition of the Rio Grande and Burlington nothing could be done to reduce the 20 per cent. rate, which is a discrimination against Colorado and greatly injures the tourist business to the state.

After some time spent the question of [illegible] to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion. The association then adjourned to meet in Kansas City on Wednesday next.

Late Brazil News.

Washington, May 15.—Mail advices from Rio De Janeiro bring news of the presentation to President Deodoro of Brazil, of Captain Alexander Rodgers of the army and Lieutenant P. Sawyer of the navy, the two special representatives appointed by the president of the United States to visit Brazil in the interest of the Columbian exposition. Both gentlemen addressed President Deodoro and the latter replied expressing his cordial good wishes for the success of the enterprise. He assured the commissioners that Brazil would be adequately represented at the exposition, but could not give any details until the required legislation had been obtained.

The Government Exhibit

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The board of management of government exhibits was in session two hours and a half this afternoon. The representative of the navy department submitted for formal approval the detailed plans for the structure in miniature of a modern battle ship, which is designed as the principal exhibit of that department. It was reported that the forms of contract, the specifications and advertisements, had been published under the supervision of the law and he asked formal authority from the board to proceed at once with the work. This matter consumed the greater part of the meeting resulting in the unanimous insertion of an advertisement for proposals. The department exhibit manager will proceed to Chicago next week to be necessarily to attending bidders and give the information with regard to the working plans. The bids will be awarded by the board as soon as possible after the consideration of the bids.

Blaine Is Worse

NEW YORK, May 15.—Secretary of State James G. Blaine is not so well this morning as he was yesterday. He is suffering from gout and passed a bad night. This morning he was propped up in bed feeling badly. The family induced him to partake of some breakfast. Dr. Fenner called this morning and after examining Mr. Blaine said it would be impossible for him to leave the city before Monday or Tuesday next. The family are very undecided as to their plans for departure.

At last reports tonight Secretary Blaine was resting very comfortably. Hired to Fire in Canada

[illegible] May 15.—Chief Clerk [illegible] dispatch says: The Dominion government is about to make a determined effort to induce all or a portion of the Canadians residing in the United States to return. For this purpose parliament will be asked [illegible] sion to make a substantial appropriation. The Dominion authorities have now a large number of agents working quietly among the Canadian colonists across the border who report that the free expenditure of money alone can start the desired tide of immigration from the United States toward the Dominion.

Pueblo Will Entertain

PUEBLO, Colo., May 15.—The Commercial club at their meeting last night, decided to entertain the delegates to the Trans-Mississippi congress for a couple of days after the Denver session is ended, and appointed a committee to make arrangements to that effect.

It was also decided to invite the officers and band stationed at Santa Fe to be present at the fourth of July celebration and opening of the great mineral palace.

Sold to the Canadian Pacific

WINNIPEG, Man., May 15.—It now seems to be an absolute certainty that the Canadian Pacific has purchased the Northern Pacific lines in Manitoba. It was confidently asserted this morning that the deal between the roads had been completed and that the Canadian Pacific takes all the Manitoba lines and terminals of the Northern Pacific almost immediately. The official transfer will take place next week. It is said a meeting of the board of trade has been called for Tuesday next to take into consideration the considered withdrawal of the Northern Pacific railway from the province.

Strike or Lockout

CHICAGO, May 15.—Grand Master Sweeney of the switchmen's union says in regard to the discharge of switchmen by the Chicago and Northwestern company: "This is not a lockout now, it is a strike. Nothing but passenger service and those only by the aid of the train men whose order seems to have an understanding with the officials, the only oath of allegiance on the McInerny case probably. No freight trains will move, for it is beyond the power of the road to secure enough men to help. The Northwestern's yards are interested and the switching facilities are limited, and such men as can be hired would not be able to handle things properly or promptly. We will win in this fight as we have won others. They have made an error that they will discover before long. I have wired the supreme council of the federation and members of the council will be here Monday to a safer point. The men represented in the council are firm in their views and determined. I have but little doubt the strikers will be upheld. Today I will have a conference with the management of the Northwestern road and will try to prevent the extension of the trouble. The calling out the men on other roads is a question for future consideration."

Grand Master Sargent of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen who is president of the Federation of Railway Employes, telegraphed last evening from Terre Haute to the Grand Pacific headquarters in response to a request for information. He said: "Strike is not sanctioned by the brotherhood. Firemen are not in the habit of leaving their engines in the middle of the road. Switchmen are not in the habit of leaving their switches in the middle of the road. Switchmen are not in the habit of leaving their switches in the middle of the road. Switchmen are not in the habit of leaving their switches

Dr McVickers of Toronto is the accredited authority for the ridiculous statement that the colored people of the south are worse off than they were thirty five years ago

Prince George of Greece, who was with the czarowitz when the latter was assassinated is getting much credit for bravery He hit the crazy assailant over the head when his back was turned It may have showed presence of mind, but it was not very dangerous.

The Esmeralda the Chilian warship of which so much has been heard recently and which may not unlikely come in conflict with the United States ship Charleston, is one of the best vessels of the Chilian navy She is a protected cruiser, built in England She was launched in June 1883, at the works of W. G Armstrong & Co, by whom she was designed and built The machinery and magazines are protected by a sloping steel deck one inch in thickness. Her armament consists of two 25 ton guns, one at the bow and one at the stern, six 4-ton broadside guns, besides machine guns. A feature of the ship is her large proportionate horse power, being 6,500 horse power to a displacement of 2,810 tons. As a consequence she is very swift, her available speed being reckoned at eighteen knots. When the rebellion broke out the Esmeralda, with most of the navy fell into the hands of the insurgents. Should she encounter the Charleston the latter would be some what over matched, though there would not be any great disparity between the two ships We would, however, trust American courage and seamanship to overcome this disadvantage and to win victory for the Stars and Stripes.

THE SUNDAY GAZETTE.

The Sunday Gazette will contain the usual number of choice articles.

In the fourth article upon General Sheridan, Lord Wolseley reviews the military events of the war up to the time of the campaign against Vicksburg.

Robert Louis Stevenson gives further instances of the strange survivals superstitions of the south Pacific islands and tells some ghost stories that for startling horror are quite remarkable

In the valuable series of Letters to Young Citizens the current article will be by Bishop A Cleveland Coxe, on "Standards of Citizenship."

A ghost story this week is by Wm. Clark Russell It is a sea story, dealing with sailors' wrongs, and is full of good humor and realism

Pa Gallant is by George Grison, is a description of the tricks of the clever rascals who make life hard for Parisian shop keepers and householders.

M C. Willis contributes an interesting article on Manufactured Woods. The various kinds of wood in common use are described, and the manner in which they are cut and manufactured is well told.

An article by the Marquis Renee de Gouraucot of the French National Library is devoted to that most magnificent of book collections

G. Felix, the famous Parisian dress maker, contributes an article on late French fashions

The Parable Cabinet story is "The Dinner Million," by Ingersoll Lockwood

Col. Bill Nye's contribution is entitled "Alone in a Bank" and is characterized by his usual humor

The number will contain beside the telegraphic reports of the Associated and United Press, and the usual departments, making a complete number, in which every one of our readers will find something to his taste

Lincoln the Gentleman

(Author Gardner)

The English-speaking world will never read the story of the rebellion without a thrill of pride and exultation Heroic and inspiring as was the achievement of the Puritans in throwing off the tyranny of the Stuarts, and establishing in its place not the rule of a mere democracy, but a wise and liberal polity, the rolling hand of time diminishes for such a nation its distinctness and reality With the defence of the Union it is different We can almost hear the reverberations of the cannon at Vicksburg and our hands may still clasp the hands of those who over Mobile and will fall on at Gettysburg and Chattanooga. The glory won by the English race is so near, that it still stirs the blood like a trumpet to read of the patriotism of the men who fought at the call of Lincoln. Nothing is more admirable as nothing is more dramatic in recorded history, than the manner in which the North sprang to arms at the news that the nation's flag had been fired on at Fort Sumter It is all very well to hire soldiers at so much a day and send them to the front with salvos and rejoicings, but the action of the eastern and western states meant a great deal more than this. It meant a voluntary sacrifice on the part of men who had nothing to gain and everything to lose by throwing over a life of ease or labor for the hope of a soldier's grave. A continent was on fire

It is one of the greatest of Lincoln's claims to admiration, that though he sympathized with the fervor and enthusiasm of his countrymen, he was not carried away by it He was one of those rare men who can at once be zealous and moderate who are kindled by great ideas and who yet retain complete control of the critical faculty And it is on this, Lincoln was a man who could be reserved without the chill of reserve Again he could make allowance for domestic infirmity of a human instrument without ever falling into the partiality of a conspirator. He often acted in his dealings with men as a professed judge might have acted but his conduct was due, not any disbelief in virtue, but to a wide tolerance and a clear knowledge of human nature He saw things as a disillusionized man sees them and yet in the end he never suffered by Calliwhiteness. For suffusing and ennobling his other qualities was a serenity of mind which affected the whole man. He viewed the world too much as a whole to be greatly troubled or perplexed by its details. To this serenity of mind was due an almost total absence of indignation in the ordinary sense Generals might half ruin the cause for the sake of some trumpery quarrel, or in order to gain some petty personal advantage office-seekers might worry at the very crisis of the nation's fate but none of the petty jealousies, or spites, or the follies could rouse in Lincoln the indignation or the indignation that would have been wakened in ordinary men. Pity, and nothing else, was the feeling such exhibitions occasioned him Lincoln seems to have felt the sin of war as the guilt of every mortal transgression His large and tender views of nature made him at heart a universal apologist He was of course too practical and too great a statesman to let this sensibility to the excesses that can be made for human conduct induce him to allow misdeeds to go unpunished or uncorrected He acted as firmly and as severely as if he had experienced the most burning indignation But the moment we come to Lincoln's real feelings we see that he is never incensed, and that even in its most legitimate form the desire for retribution is absent from his mind

"Tout comprendre c'est tout pardonner" was the secret of his attitude toward human affairs That is not the highest wisdom but it rests on the right and also on the rare side so much for the intellectual side of Lincoln's nature Behind it was a personality of singular charm Tenderness and humor were its main characteristics As he rod through a forest in spring time he would be pitiful about putting back the young birds that had fallen from their nests There was not a situation in his life he would not afford him the subject for a kindly jest, It is with a heart so full of gentleness and good-temper to sustain the unbearable weight of responsibility which the war threw upon the shoulders of the president Most men would have been crushed by the burden His serenity of temper saved Lincoln Except when the unsparing necessity of having to sign the order for a military execution took away his sleep he carried on his work without any visible sign of overstrain

Not the least of Lincoln's achievements is to be found in the fact that though for four years he wielded a power and a personal authority greater than that exercised by any monarch on earth he never gave satirist or caricaturist the slightest real ground for declaring that his sudden rise to world wide fame had turned the head of the backwoodsman Under the circumstances there would have been every excuse for Lincoln, had he assumed to his subordinates somewhat of the bearing of the autocrat he was. It is a sign of the absolute sincerity and good sense of the president that he was under no sort of a temptation to do so. Lincoln was before all things a gentleman, and the good taste inseparable from that character made it impossible for him to be spoiled by power and position This grace and strength of character is never better shown than in the letters to his generals, victorious or defeated. When they were beaten, he was anxious to share the blame, when victorious he was instant to deny by anticipation any rumor that he had inspired the strategy of the campaign. If a general had to be reprimanded, he did it as only the most perfect of gentlemen could do it. He could convey the severest censure without inflicting any wound that would not heal, and this not by using roundabout expressions, but in the plainest language "He writes to me like a father," were the heartfelt words of a commander who had been reprimanded by the president. Throughout these communications, the manner in which he not only conceals but altogether sinks all sense that the men to whom they were addressed were in effect his subordinates is worthy of special note. "A breath could unmake them, as a breath had made," and yet Lincoln writes as if his generals were absolutely independent.

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments by the Rev. James H. Ogden.

Dr Ramsford, on Sabbath morning, May 3, in a sermon incidentally replied to the criticisms which have been made upon his course in inviting unauthorizedly ordained persons into his pulpit. He declares emphatically that he and his church are thoroughly loyal to the Episcopal church, and thoroughly ready to render prompt obedience to any competent authority within it but he also calls attention to the fact that his critics have assumed without argument that his course is a violation of the rubrics and orders of the church, and have appealed to the public instead of appealing to the episcopal authorities. He says it would be easy to quote precedent after precedent in support of his action, and cites, among other authorities quite as good, we may add, on canon law as that of any of the signers of the protest—Dr. Muhlenberg He frankly concedes that the majority of the clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal church believe that there can be no true church without bishops, but he declares that position to be untenable, and cites in confirmation of his own position the views of Archbishop Whately, Dr Arnold of Rugby, and Cannon Liddon, the latter, by the way, distinctively a high churchman

The Churchman in a recent editorial says "On the one hand, it cannot be claimed that lay preaching is explicitly authorized and on the other it must be admitted that the many bishops and other ministers of all schools in the church who have sanctioned and allowed lay preaching, have not understood nor believed it to be prohibited by the canons. As a matter of fact, we do not believe that any court either would or justly could, convict a pastor of disobedience to any existing canon for inviting or permitting a layman to address his congregation and we will venture the assertion that, under any rules of construction which would warrant a conviction in such a case there is hardly a bishop or pastor of any Protestant Episcopal church who could not be easily convicted of innumerable infractions of that or some other part of the canon law We intend not the least to quibble argument when we add that some of those who insist that the preaching of laymen involves an infraction of the canons would fare badly indeed before a court which should apply their own principles of construction to sundry other matters to which we do not choose more particularly to refer

It is said, of course that while lay preaching may be perfectly lawful in itself and while it may not violate any of the existing canons of the church yet this can in reason be said only of the preaching of laymen and cannot be applied to the preaching of ministers of other religious bodies The reasoning would be sound enough but for the fact that the Church has constantly refused to look at some things in a very broad way Thus she regards every baptized man who holds the faith as a Christian man and whether she knows it or not she holds him to be one of her children It may be his misfortune not to appreciate his privileges but that does not in the long after the great fact as the Church understands it With reference to ordination the Church's plan is equally simple As she knows only one baptism so she knows only one commission of the ministry If any man is ministering under a commission which is not known to her she regards him as no minister at him or at but if any man whose call she can trace and from whom she can learn he may every would enter her pulpit she would simply require him to be certain that her commission of his ministry is in her hands then if any man not from a minister of this church is permitted to address a congregation of the church it is not because of any ministerial commission but simply and solely as a baptized Christian man Whether he is acknowledged as a minister elsewhere does not enter into the principle of the thing at all

In many Sunday schools parts of Scripture are memorized and repeated by the whole school every Sunday In others the practice is confined to the younger classes. A great service is rendered to young people by storing the not lost and most precious portions of the Bible in their memories. It ought to be a far more general custom in families to repeat together these passages. Some of them like the first and twenty first Psalms, the Beatitudes and part of the Sermon on the Mount are readily fixed on by every one who makes selections for this purpose Other passages as valuable are often overlooked A tract has been published containing twenty of these passages, arranged by Bishop J H Vincent and entitled The Church Steps The white cover with a star pattern are excellent for their purpose The tract is sold for 50 cents per hundred from the Chautauqua Century Press Mitchell Pa We wish that every child in the Sunday school might minutely [illegible] and the grown people also

Dr R S MacArthur of New York is authority for the statement that Rev M [illegible] Dickson married seventy eight of the great and rich at $40 bill saying that [illegible] charges of the doctor to take out $ Dr Dixon [illegible] and [illegible] convert this the bill was an error

Concerning the death of Phillips Brooks [illegible] Mass Sun [illegible] tion property [illegible] than [illegible] Brooks [illegible] Christianity [illegible] on of the [illegible] bodies Of this he says Phillips Brooks is the most distinguished representative in the American church His close [illegible] contradiction of the doctrine of the party spirit in the degree of Massachusetts He is not a Low Churchman if [illegible] new [illegible] what formerly was [illegible] man who [illegible] in part [illegible] phase of Christianity practice with the Episcopal church He is a Broad Churchman because he puts emphasis upon those great fundamental characteristics of the Gospel of Christ in which all Christians believe and also because he is willing to cooperate with men of all opinions who are working for what Muilford has called moral adaptation to our time called The Republic of God He is a man of great affirmations and his affirmations are pretty [illegible] Hence [illegible] but not anti Romanist Evangelical but not anti Unitarian Churchman but not anti Independent Christian, but not anti Humanitarian. He has the rare ability of being vigorous without being controversial positive without being dogmatic intense without being narrow All religious truth in the alembic of his mind is purged of its earthly constituents and issues from his lips in spiritual affirmations. He converts theology into religion and men of all theology and of none at all feel the force and acknowledge the charm of his eloquence because all men are at heart, whatever their theology or no theology religious and he reaches the heart of humanity

Says the Congregationalist It is a matter of congratulation of all denominations that the Episcopal church by Mr [illegible] with so much enthusiasm has chosen Dr Phillips Brooks to the office of bishop Doubtless the controlling influence to the choice was Dr Brooks' personal character and great abilities, his profound sympathy with men, his broad and not le type of piety. His election cannot be regarded as a triumph for any party in the big [illegible] at the same time it will not be forgotten how earnestly he advocated a resolution which he proposed, of fraternal greeting to the National Congregational council from the Episcopal convention, when both bodies were in session in Chicago in 1886. Though the proposition failed through the action of the house of bishops, its consideration and the support it received showed a marked advance in the spirit of that denomination toward other Christian bodies. Dr Brooks election does mean that the Episcopal church is coming to regard other denominations with somewhat of the respect, sympathy and fraternal feeling Dr. Brooks has always shown, and which have helped to make him so greatly beloved by all who know him who love our Lord Jesus Christ"

No less than seventy really able sermons have now convened the general assembly to consider the inaugural address of Professor Briggs It begins to look a little as if the Presbyterian Union Theological seminary might be able on long to sympathize with the Congregational Andover Theological seminary in suffering denominations as a nest of heterodoxy

Beadle and Natural Gas.

SCOTTDALE, Pa. May 12—When I detrained at Greensburg the other night the air was crimping cold for May and the room to which I was taken (time 11 p. m) was almost as [illegible] as Canada. To my complaint my colored guide rejoined

"I'll get the kerosene I'll fix the fire off"

Kerosene! Let the fire off! What sort of slang was this? He soon produced a sort of wrench turned a little bolt in the hearth and applied a lighted match to what seemed like a pile of whitewashed brickbats in the grate there was a flash that made me jump back, and then as he turned back the bolt the whole grate glowed and roared gently with a white blaze

It was my first experience with natural gas as common fuel, and how very, very nice it was Simply delicious But in a few minutes I grew very restless. There was something lacking I could not poke the fire. There was neither poker nor shovel—neither coal nor ashes and the pan below the grate was as clean as a dining room plate The pile of white brickbats looked horribly unnatural for a fire—they remained always the same size and the gentle roar or swish of the blaze was accurately monotonous. I could not read, I could not gaze into the fire and think of the joys of childhood the romance of early manhood There was no speculation in the coals, and no coals to speculate in. I got so nervous that I wanted to kick the whole contrivance into bits and in self defense I turned it off and went to bed.

Suppose the brain weary city man who once had a happy childhood in the country and had longed for years to ramble over the old place again should return there and find that everything was a sham that the sycamore stumps should prove to be cotton [illegible] the alleged trees in fact artificial and the Lady Jane roses [illegible] the Hudson river nothing but a paint [illegible] all remaining exactly the same as [illegible] What he might feel we all know [illegible] what many old friends I felt in getting used to those plaster [illegible] In the first place [illegible] white blocks they fill the [illegible] of all possible things, they [illegible] the natural color wood [illegible] than that is the [illegible] notoriety of the thing. CHARGED WITH CONTEMPT

Attorney H. H. Artz Tried Before the District Court.

A crowded house yesterday afternoon was entertained by the taking of testimony in the case against Mr. H. H. Artz in the district court. The proceeding was based upon an information filed by Deputy Attorney Garrison, the contents of which were published by the Gazette on Wednesday last. Some time in fall, one "Cog" Watson was arrested and charged with committing a criminal assault upon the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Strott. Pending the preliminary trial, Watson forfeited his bonds and went to New Mexico, but was recaptured and brought back to the city. He was given a hearing in January, bound over to the grand jury and indicted in April. The charge at the preliminary examination was admitted by Mr. J. W. Lewis.

Lawyer to the client Watson was a well-known old fox, the pupil of Mr. Artz appeared yesterday, Mr. Lewis as his attorney. The defendant is the friend and testified that he was acting in entire good faith in the action charged, alleging that he did so at the request of Mr. and Mrs. Strott.

Deputy Attorney Garrison called Mrs. Strott as a witness, and her examination developed the following facts. On April 15, the day before the meeting of the grand jury, she was approached by Mrs. Briggs, who remarked to her that she ought to drop the prosecution of Watson, and that if she did there would be money in it for her and her husband. Mrs. Strott remarked that they would not discontinue the prosecution for a thousand dollars. Artz at this time did not have much to say about the matter, the Strotts gave their testimony before the grand jury, and reported to the officials what had occurred.

SETTING THE TRAP.

District Attorney Garrison, his deputy, John Cochran, and Sheriff Jackson, desiring to punish such an open attempt to spirit away witnesses in an important criminal case, advised Mr. and Mrs. Strott to continue the negotiations with Mr. Artz. He was communicated with through Mrs. Briggs, and a number of interviews were had at the Strott residence.

Marshal L. C. Dana and Mr. F. A. Mangold were called in, and secreted themselves in an adjoining room on different occasions when Mr. Artz unfolded his plan of operations. In brief, his proposition was that the Strotts were to receive $250, less the cost of transportation, to Salt Lake, and leave the city so as to be beyond the reach of the court at the time of trial. The defendant drafted a letter which was to be copied and signed by Mr. and Mrs. Strott, stating that they were tired of the court's delays, and requesting Mr. Artz to sell their furniture and forward to them the proceeds, this letter to be used by Artz in mitigation of his action in the premises when the case should be called for trial and none of the prosecution's witnesses should be found.

Mr. Strott was called as a witness at 7 o'clock, to which time a recess had been taken, and corroborated his wife's story. The prosecution then called Mrs. Briggs, against whom an information had also been filed. She detailed her part in the matter in a straightforward manner, asserting that she had no idea of wrongdoing in the affair. Artz had offered her $25 for her services as a mutual friend, but she had refused to accept it.

THE SENSATION.

When the defendant first took the stand he informed witnesses that Mr. Dana and Mr. Mangold had overheard the conversations, he was evidently very much surprised. Mr. Mangold came on to the stand and detailed in an explicit manner the entire negotiations as overheard by him. At this point the defense collapsed, and Mr. Mangold was not cross examined. When Marshal Dana was called, Mr. Lewis stated that he would concede that Mr. Dana would corroborate Mr. Mangold as to the occurrences, and, consequently, his evidence was not heard.

This concluded the evidence, and, upon request of Mr. Lewis, the matter was continued until this morning, at which time it will be finally disposed of.

Wouldn't Accept It.

People who strive to elevate certain classes in the social fabric often find, to their surprise, that these very persons jealously guard the barriers of class distinctions. The following illustration of this fact is given by the author of "Four Years in Rebel Capitals."

A Richmond lady had a maid who, devoted and constant to her mistress, was burned with curiosity for a sight of everything pertaining to "Mars' Linkum's men," and especially for "de cole."

Pat swift, indeed, had new contrabands been to preach the gospel of Alphabet, and Sabbath schools seemed to have been fraught in by every army ambulance, so numerously did they spring up in the captured capital. So early one day Miss Sophia donned her very best, and with shining face bied her like any bird but a snail to school.

Very brief was her absence; her return was swift, but pouting and with unduly ruffled nose.

It soon came out that the teacher had been impressing the children with the fact that all present were born "free and equal," and that each of them was as good as she was.

"Did you say dat, now?" interrupted Mrs. Sophia. "Yo' say 'fee jes' ekal

[illegible] I will prove it to

[illegible] 'Joint nomesl,' was the response. 'Do I is, sho' fuff.' But does yo' say [illegible] as to sacrifice my mind?'—'Certainly you are.'

'Den I'm jes' gwine out yere, right [illegible] Clarissa Sophia, shifting action [illegible] 'If I'm good as my missus, I'm gwine quit fer I jes' know she [illegible] sho' no sich white trash [illegible]'"

One on Barnum.

When Senator Mahone, of Virginia, came here in March, 1881, to take his place in the United States senate the country was excited as to his affiliation. The senate was close, the little Virginian everything handed. The Democrats hoped to secure him. Should the Republicans [illegible] which [illegible] seemed very amusing, and he [illegible] them so much that he delayed declarations of his political position some weeks. While things were in uncertain condition and the whole country was wondering, Mr. Mahone, being in his room one evening, received a card.

"Show the gentleman up," he said. The man, who was a perfect stranger to the senator, entered, put his hat on a table, seated himself and sat down and proceeded at once to business in this style:

"My name is P. T. Barnum. You have probably heard of me. I am just starting out on my summer tour with the greatest moral show on earth. I have called to make you a plain proposition. If you will travel with me this summer I will give you $10,000 a month. I have got Jumbo, the biggest elephant ever brought to the United States, and with you my show will be the talk of the place. Will you accept?"

Mahone, who is full Virginian and a very [illegible] but he didn't get angry. He quietly replied: "Sir, I belong to a peculiar people, and I do not at present see my way clear to accept your flattering offer." The story is told by Edward Wise in Washington Letter.

The Mexican Messiah.

Prince Iturbide, Orland has not only a good claim, but really the best claim to be the Hapsburg of the Mexicans. He is the most western part of Europe. He is lazy, and in the earlier ages, when the Christian era was known as the "Holy Land." Between A. D. [illegible] and A. D. 50 it was the most active center of missionary enterprise in Europe, and the most zealous were not those who were all others for their daring and adventure. It is natural, therefore, to suspect that Ireland may have been the home of Quetzalcoatl, and if that were so, to expect that early Irish record would contain some references to his voyage.

Upon this the inquiry suggests itself, Do the early Irish chronicles, which are voluminous and minute, contain anything relating to a missionary voyage across the Atlantic at all corresponding to that which Quetzalcoatl must have taken from some part of western Europe?

To one who, step by step, had arrived at this stage of the present inquiry, it was not a little startling to come across an obscure and almost forgotten record, which is, in all its main features, in most striking conformity with the Mexican legend of Quetzalcoatl. This is the curious account of a transatlantic voyage of a certain Irish ecclesiastic named St Brendan in the middle of the sixth century—about A. D. 559. The narrative appears to have attracted little or no attention in modern times, but it was widely diffused through the middle ages.—Dominick Daly in Popular Science Monthly.

ARTIST AND FUNNY MAN.

Charles Lederer, Who Shines with Such Luster in Chicago.

[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, May 14.—It is not often that we find an equally poised combination of literary and artistic ability, but Charles Lederer, of the Chicago Herald, probably comes as near as is possible to this ideal. His pictures, especially when they illustrate his own work, are excruciatingly funny. The power of caricature is probably better developed in Lederer than in almost any other artist in the country.

You can imagine, as you look at his sketches, the ridiculous light that a practical joke might place you in, and it is easy to understand how the spectators to your misery might never get over the impression, so that every time they saw you afterward they would smile, no matter how dignified you may be, and this is precisely what Lederer's pictures do for their victim. They are irresistible. Perhaps in the way of pure humorous work his best efforts have been in the baseball field. His illustrations of a baseball account would unscrew a coffin.

CHARLES LEDERER.

Lederer was born in Lowell, Mass., in 1856, and moved to Brooklyn early in life. At fourteen he was apprenticed to a wood engraver, and at the end of a year took a smaller house at $75 and left artist, and began his artistic career by drawing comic valentines. He did a great deal of work for many papers during the next few years, but finally drifted into the publishing business. Then, in 1881, he went to Chicago, published an illustrated weekly that lived six months, illustrated stories, etc., until he began to do work for all the papers in turn, finally going on The Herald. Walter Wellman, speaking of the way Lederer first came on the paper, says:

"It was made my duty, by the managing editor to 'look after the pictures.' The duty was not a pleasant one. I knew no more about the picture business than I did about hypnotism. Good artists were scarce, engraving methods were crude. After floundering about a few months I discovered a little black haired, bright eyed fellow who, in a top story den, was making sketches for show pictures and some weekly papers.

"'Can you make pictures for a daily newspaper?' I asked.

"'Well, I should smile,' replied the little man. And Lederer has been making Chicago smile ever since."

He is said to receive a larger salary than any other artist west of New York.

TOM MASON.

Rosamond's Conundrum.

Five-year-old Rosamond, whose father is very clever at making charades, was seated at dinner one day when several guests were present. They were all giving conundrums when the little girl quietly said, "Papa, I have one." "Well, my child, what is it?" "Why is the bark of a tree like a dead kitten?" The answer: "Because it can't mew," was greeted with roars of laughter.—New York Tribune.

Bread must not be broken into the soup, nor the soup plate tipped, as the last mouthful must be devoured. Soup must be taken from the side of the spoon, not from the end. A whole slice of bread or biscuit or muffin should not be buttered, at once. It should not be cut, but should be broken off in small pieces, and a bit of butter put on as they are eaten, one by one.

The best way to examine the color of a sample of water is to place the liquid in a long tube closed at each end by a plate of glass. While one extremity of the tube is directed to the source of light, the color is noted at the other. By using the same tube for a series of water samples, it will be possible thus to get properly comparable results.

Old sight—presbyopia—begins at about the age of forty. It is first noticed by the tendency to hold the paper further off. The glasses should not enlarge the letters, but simply render them clear and natural at the ordinary reading distance. Whatever the ocular defect, the proper glasses should be obtained as soon as it is discovered.

There are few intelligent men and women of our day who are not connected with some charitable or reformatory or other philanthropic institution as managers or trustees or members of committees, or who are not active workers in some organized form of benevolence.

Dickens' home, Gad's Hill place, is a great object of interest to Americans in London. It is now the property of Frank Law Lotham, and remains just as it was when the novelist died.

Mrs. Pilkey and son have just completed and moved into a fine new residence in West Colorado Springs. This is one out of many valuable improvements which are being made in the suburbs of our city.

At the First Congregational church, corner of Tejon and St. Vrain streets, services will be held at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m. The pastor, Rev. James B. Gregg, will preach both morning and evening. Subject in the evening, "Sea and Shore."

The entertainment that has been in preparation for the past few weeks, under the direction of Miss Hext, is now nearing completion and will be presented at the opera house Thursday, May 28, for the benefit of the M. E. church, South.

The Brooklyn Eagle of May 10, contains a column account of the Edward Menlahn bigamy case, gotten up in the most approved metropolitan sensational style. One would hardly recognize our city, mentioned in the case, and Manitou Park is given as a suburb of the city.

A party of people from Stamford, Ct., arrived in the city in a private carriage yesterday afternoon and spent the night at the Antlers. The names of the party are Mr. and Mrs. W. K. McHarg, two children and governess, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Swords, Dr. A. M. Hurlbut and Walter Hopewell.

Mr. Barnett of the Antlers, has been served with a notice to the effect that a Colorado City party who got hurt in the falling of the porch Monday will sue for damages. It has been suggested that Mr. Barnett sue for damages the people who crowded onto his porch and broke it down, at least enough to pay for the new one.

Following is Emery P. Moon's record of the weather, taken at Husted, Colo., for the week ending May 15, 1891: Highest temperature, 81 degrees, on the 8th; lowest temperature, 33 degrees, on the 13th; weekly mean temperature, 54.14 degrees. Direction of the wind, south four days, varying one day, north one day, northwest one day.

Superintendents Adjourn

The association of county superintendents met yesterday morning in the First Presbyterian church with a good attendence. President Thomas presided. There were interesting addresses and talks by the superintendents. Among these, was one by Mr. S. T. Hamilton on the "Official records of directors and county superintendents" which called attention to the most glaring faults of the present system, and suggested the remedy of making a complete change.

A committee of three including the state superintendent, was appointed to look into the present system and make such changes as needed.

There was an address by State Superintendent N. B. Coy, who recommended uniform action among all county superintendents.

The officers elected were for the ensuing year as follows: President, N. B. Coy; vice president, E. C. Stimson; second vice president, R. Berrey; secretary, P. M. Conditt; treasurer, B. C. Killin; executive committee, A. D. Shepherd, Arapahoe, W. V. Casey, Boulder, D. L. Harris, Kit Carson.

The meeting adjourned to meet at Aspen June 15, 16, 17 and 18, 1892.

In the afternoon quite a party of the members took a car for Cheyenne canon, kindly furnished by the Rapid Transit company, where they spent a large part of the afternoon.

The Ragan Lecture

There were few if any in the large audience that awaited the appearance of Mr. Ragan in the opera house last night who did not go away at the close of his lecture fully satisfied with the excellence of what that gentleman has to say in regard to the wonders of Alaska and of the route thereto.

Mr. Ragan is a most careful and thorough observer of every minute detail. Nothing of interest passes his eyes unnoticed. All the features which tend toward making Alaska the most novel and interesting portion of the American continent can be seen upon his canvas. Beginning at points in the Alleghanies along the Columbia river the trip which he made last summer was followed with interest by his hearers down this remarkable stream past Mount Hood, the salmon fisheries, Portland and Seattle, to the open sea, where the scenes on shipboard were put upon the canvas. Idaho, Alaska.

As he was portrayed vividly both in the lecture and upon the canvas as the desolate country of glaciers and bleak mountain ranges with pine forests at their base. The native inhabitants were given considerable attention by the speaker, and the description of their appearance, character, habits and condition was most interesting interspersed as it was with both plain and colored views of themselves and their surroundings.

The speaker mentioned Colorado Springs during his lecture in complimentary terms and stated that he had often alluded to it in his lectures, and it had always received applause from his hearers.

Mr. Ragan's descriptions are terse and vivid and he should be favored with a large audience next Monday night to hear of the land of unexplored mountains, of immense glaciers, and beautiful bays and islands whose fame is already widely spread.

District Court

The testimony in the Trotter case was closed at noon yesterday, and the arguments occupied until 5 o'clock. After an absence of two hours, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. District Attorney Garrison assisted by Mr. Patterson tried this case well, but court officers are well aware that a conviction is rarely obtained upon the evidence of tools found in old wells or prospect holes.

The Arizona was heard in the evening, an account of which will be found elsewhere.
